They discussed about their understanding of faith and values. Its importance, limitations and benefits were also discussed. A very healthy, open minded conversation took place. Students learnt the art of speaking in public thereby gaining confidence. There were a number of students who participated for the first time. They were hesitant in speaking at first but opened up later on.

Then the facilitator asked the students to share their views on medical ethics. Students of both the schools shared their views on this topic with several examples of their real life experience. One student gave the example of his neighbour's son who was suffering from life threatening disease and his parents were very worried about his health but were not willing for euthanasia. The health of the child was continuously deteriorating. The worried parents approached all the best doctors but didn't get any positive response and denied to apply euthanasia on their son. It was very difficult and heart broken for the parents to see their child on the death bed.

Children also shared their views on euthanasia, organ donation and stem cell research. One child also threw light that euthanasia is not accepted by all the religion and its against humanity. Children then cross questioned each other related to the topic. At last children thanked the facilitator for giving them a virtual platform to share their opinions.

The topic of video conference was Climate Change. The video conference started with the introduction and welcome of students of all the schools by the technical support Ms. Nonica Kochar.

The facilitator Mr.Christopher Muscat introduced the general guidelines of video conference to the students through PowerPoint Presentation.

Then the facilitator asked the students what they understand by Climate change. Students of different school enthusiastically shared their views on this topic with several examples of their experiences. Global climate change is the existential threat of our time, caused by human activities. The impacts of climate change are rising sea levels, extreme weather, natural disasters, new cycles of flooding and drought, and economic instability.

Addressing global warming and tackling climate change require national and international action and policy changes. But individuals, households, and communities have a vital role to play too. Individuals in the major emitting nations can shift their day-to-day behaviour and reduce their carbon footprint. Fishers, farmers, and other resource users in developing countries can also adopt climate-friendlier practices and reduce their impact on nature-based solutions to climate change. Climate change needs behaviour change.

Students then cross questioned each other related to the topic. At last children thanked the facilitator for giving them a virtual platform to share their opinions.
